▶ For the maintenance of upholstery, use only the cleaning agents and maintenance practices meant for that purpose. Avoid bleaching cleaning agents, rubbing, and too much water. Clean the sofa regularly with a vacuum cleaner at low power and by using a special furniture nozzle. It is natural for leather and cover material to stretch to some extent, which may result in some wrinkles on the furniture. The extent of elasticity depends on the fabric.

▶ Wash the covers according to the maintenance instructions of the fabric. After washing, stretch the covers and fit them while they are still damp – the covers will dry into their correct shape. Otherwise, they may shrink and no longer fit.

▶ The arm- and backrests of a sofa are not meant for sitting on. In the case of some models, the slightly softer polyurethane foam layers may distort in time, which may cause the sofa to lose its initial beautiful shape and the fabric to curl.
NB! Do not sit on the backrests of the sofa beds Simon and Emma – the backrest may break due to the structure of the frame used in the bed mechanism.

▶ The bed mechanisms used in sofa beds are meant as temporary sleeping structures, not as permanent beds. As sitting on the edge of an opened sofa bed causes the mechanism to bend, an opened sofa bed is not meant for sitting or jumping on.

▶ Feather cushions require regular fluffing to restore their softness and shape. We recommend fluffing seat cushions once a week and backrest cushions once a month, as well as occasionally turning the cushions around. For better results, remove the cover for fluffing. The slightly disorderly shape of cushions with a feather filling is natural, not a flaw. Reversible cushions should be turned occasionally to maintain their beautiful shape. As sitting makes cushion covers twist frontward, turning the cushion around will make the cover move back into its correct position. Turning cushions also helps reduce the distortion of the filling material at the places you like to sit the most.

Allergy warning: microfiber cushions may contain feathers!

▶ We recommend oiling the metal mechanisms of sofa beds and beds once or twice a year with multifunctional oil.

▶ Store your furniture at normal room temperature. Humidity and cold may damage the product. Do not place furniture closer to a heater than 30 cm and protect it from heavy sunlight. If placed next to a heat source, leather covers may become brittle and stiff, and cracks may appear.

▶ We recommend moving furniture by lifting it up. By dragging furniture, its legs may deform and damage the floor. Lift the sofa by supporting the frame from beneath.

Our team is more than happy to take care of your Softrend products even after you have taken them home. If you feel that your Softrend furniture requires maintenance by a specialist or you would like to replace the cover materials, do not hesitate to contact us!
